Warning On Rogue Attacks

Lebanon tells Palestinian groups not to fire on Israel

BEIRUT, LEBANON | Lebanon defense minister Elias Murr on Sunday said he was certain Hezbollah would not break the cease-fire but warned rogue Palestinian groups of harsh measures and a traitor's fate if they incited Israeli retaliation by launching rockets into the Jewish state.

Murr

Also, Prime Minister Fuad Saniora, a Sunni Muslim, toured the devastated Hezbollah stronghold in Shiite south Beirut and decried the destruction wrought by Israeli bombs as "crimes against humanity."

In Jerusalem, Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Olmert said he would name a panel to investigate government and military conduct of the conflict, in the face of criticism that authorities prosecuted a messy war with an unclear outcome and waffled over key decisions.

A day after Israel conducted a pre-dawn commando raid deep in the Bekaa Valley, prompting U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan to declare the Israelis in violation of the Security Council cease-fire resolution, there were no reports of fresh incidents and the truce held into a seventh day.

Residents in the mountains east of Beirut, however, reported continued Israeli overflights. And the Lebanese army issued a statement accusing Israel of not abiding by the cease-fire because of the airspace violations. (AP)

FIRE EMERGENCIES | Hot Dog Surgery A Virginia Beach, Va., veterinarian performed an emergency surgery to save the life of a dog Thursday while his clinic was on fire, WAVY-TV reported. David Laurence was in surgery when a light caught fire, which began to

CHOCOLATE

Learn From Augustus Gloop's Mistakes

It might sound like a chocoholic's dream, but stepping into a vat of viscous chocolate became a two-hour nightmare for a Kenosha, Wis., man Friday. Darmin Garcia, an employee of a company that supplies chocolate ingredients, said he was pushing the chocolate down into the vat because it was stuck. But it became loose and he slid into the hopper. "It was in my hair, in my ears, my mouth, everywhere," said Garcia. "I felt like I weighed 900 pounds. I couldn't move." The chocolate was 110 degrees, hotter than a hot tub, said Capt. Greg Sinnen of the Kenosha Fire Department. (AP)

BREAK-INS

Mission: Impossibly Stupid

Leicester, England, burglars spent weeks chipping through reinforced concrete to get into a jewelry store, but accidentally broke inside a convenience store, the Leicester Mercury reported.

The burglars had occupied the empty property above the stores, eventually making a 3-foot-wide hole in the floor to get into the store. When they entered and discovered their mistake, they fled empty-handed. The jewelry store was three doors away. "Someone has gone to all this effort and not taken anything," owner Harj Khera said. ROBOTICS

Dance Machine

Great, just what the world needs: robots specifically programmed to do the "YMCA" song. Oh, wait, our bad. This is a Japanese traditional dance that children were being taught Thursday by a humanoid robot called "Wabot." The 13-inch-tall, 2-pound android — developed by the Japanese company iXs Research — performed part of a Kyogen play in Tokyo to entertain and educate the children. Now, if only they could invent some that did the "Electric Slide." That'd be useful. (EXPRESS)

STREETS

So That's Why No Maoris Lived There

Tokoroa, New Zealand, is changing a street name after it was found to translate to "Sh*t Street," Deutsche Presse Agentur reported. The road name is "Kaka Street" — which is supposed to be the Maori name for a native parrot. However, "kaka," in the Maori language, means "excrement," and the correct name for the parrot is "kaakaa." A language teacher's complaint prompted the change. (EXPRESS)

Ramsey Suspect Flies Back to U.S.

Karr leaves Bangkok; reports say he visited Thai sex-change clinic

LOS ANGELES | John Mark Karr, the suspect in connection with the death of 6-year-old JonBenet Ramsey, sipped champagne and ate fried king prawns in business class Sunday after being put aboard a flight to Los Angeles to face charges in the United States.

As Karr wined and dined in style and chatted with the three U.S. officials escorting him, another bombshell emerged: reports that Karr sought treatment at a Thai sex-change clinic.

His Thai Airways International flight took off about 8 p.m. for the 15-hour flight to Los Angeles. Karr's journey will eventually end in Boulder, Colo., where he is expected to face charges of first-degree murder, kidnapping and child sexual assault in connection with the young beauty queen's 1996 killing.

Karr, dressed neatly in a red, short-sleeved, button-down shirt and black tie, was not handcuffed while being whisked through Don Muang International Airport in Bangkok. At the departure gate, he talked amiably with fellow passengers.

The 41-year-old teacher sat in a business-class window seat next to Mark Spray, an investigator with the Boulder County District Attorney's office. A U.S. Embassy official and an agent with "Homeland Security" on his T-shirt were also part of the escort party.

When Karr lands in Los Angeles late Sunday, he will be processed by immigration officials and is expected to be arrested by local authorities on an arrest warrant out of Colorado, said Carolyn French, spokeswoman for the Boulder County district attorney's office.

Karr will then have an extradition hearing in Los Angeles within the next few days, French said. If he agrees to waive extradition, Karr will then be taken to Boulder County. JOCELYN GECKER (AP)

Lieberman Calls for Rumsfeld to Quit

WASHINGTON | Sen. Joe Lieberman, attacked by fellow Democrats as being too close to the White House on the Iraq war, on Sunday called on Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld to resign but said the United States cannot "walk away" from the Iraqis.

Lieberman, the one-time Democratic vice-presidential candidate, is running as an independent in his bid for a fourth term since losing the Democratic nomination to newcomer Ned Lamont, who harnessed voters' anger against the war in Iraq. Lieberman, an early supporter of the Iraq war, said he had called for Rumsfeld to step down in 2003.

"With all respect to Don Rumsfeld, who has done a grueling job for six years, we would benefit from new leadership to work with our military in Iraq," he said on CBS' "Face the Nation." Lieberman said the Bush administration should have sent more troops into Iraq "to secure the country."

"His newfound 'criticism' of the war won't convince Connecticut voters after so many years of stubbornly rubber-stamping Bush's failed policies," a statement from the Lamont campaign said. (AP)

Katrina Victims Scattered

Evacuees displaced by storm have made their way to all 50 states

DECATUR, GA. | With riveting cadence, the pastor quotes from the book of Acts — assurance from the apostle Paul that only through tribulation might disciples enter the kingdom of heaven.

At this, from the front row of the congregation, Mary Ann Williams nods and smiles. She has been reflecting on tribulation — about the deluge from Hurricane Katrina that wrecked her New Orleans home, on wrangling with the government for aid and on the struggle, after she and five relatives settled in an apartment in this Atlanta suburb, to be accepted here — not to be seen, in her words, as “dirty bums, thieves, robbers.”

But mostly Williams, who is 50 and has vibrant red-orange hair matched by her vibrant smile, has been reflecting on this place, the Greater St. Stephen Full Gospel Baptist Church. Its New Orleans congregation displaced, it has sprouted up here and is slowly growing.

They were called refugees, evacuees, the diaspora of Katrina — a million Mary Ann Williamses, rich and poor and white and black and scattered by the storm one year ago.

They were absorbed by Houston, where their sheer numbers made classrooms bulge and created a sometimes uneasy tension, and by Middletown, R.I., where about a dozen of Katrina's kids will report for school in the fall. Evacuees made their way to all 50 states, government records suggest.

Hagel: GOP Is in Jeopardy

Senator says party must make a return to its core principles

WASHINGTON | Republicans have lost their way when it comes to many core GOP principles and may be in jeopardy heading into the fall elections, Sen. Chuck Hagel, R-Neb. says.

Hagel, a possible presidential candidate in 2008, said Sunday that the GOP today is a very different party from the one when he first voted Republican.

"First time I voted was in 1968 on top of a tank in the Mekong Delta," said Hagel, a Vietnam veteran. "I voted a straight Republican ticket.

The reason I did is because I believe in the Republican philosophy of governance. It's not what it used to be. I don't think it's the same today."

Hagel asked: "Where is the fiscal responsibility of the party I joined in '68? Where is the international engagement of the party I joined — fair, free trade, individual responsibility, not building a bigger government, but building a smaller government?"

His frustration does not lead him to think Democrats offer a better alternative. But Hagel wants to see the GOP return to its basic beliefs.

"I think we've lost our way," Hagel said. "And I think the Republicans are going to be in some jeopardy for that and will be held accountable."

Hagel has not decided whether he will run for president in 2008. But he respects his wife's reservations about being first lady, as cited in a book about Hagel.

"I think it just shows the immense good judgment of my wife and how sane she is. I don't know of any spouse who would wish the job of president on their husband or wife," Hagel said on Fox News Sunday. "It's a big job. It's a tough job." WILL LESTER (AP)

80 Military Recruiters Cited for Misconduct

Investigation: Cases of women being sexually abused jumped in 2005

WASHINGTON | More than 100 young women who expressed interest in joining the military in the past year were preyed upon sexually by their recruiters. Women were raped on recruiting office couches, assaulted in government cars and groped en route to entrance exams, government records show.

A six-month Associated Press investigation found that more than 80 military recruiters were disciplined last year for sexual misconduct with potential enlistees. The cases occurred across all branches of the military.

"The recruiter had all the power," said one 18-year-old victim. "He had the uniform. He had my future."

At least 35 Army recruiters, 18 Marine Corps recruiters, 18 Navy recruiters and 12 Air Force recruiters were disciplined for sexual misconduct or other inappropriate behavior with potential enlistees in 2005, according to records obtained by the AP. That's significantly more than the handful of cases disclosed in the past decade. MARTHA MENDOZA (AP)

Ozone-Friendly Chemicals Lead To Warming

WASHINGTON | When more than two dozen countries undertook efforts in 1989 to fix the ozone hole over Antarctica, they began replacing chloroflourocarbons in refrigerators, air conditioners and hair spray.

But they had little idea that using other gases that contain chlorine or fluorine instead also would contribute greatly to global warming.

Scientists now say CFCs destroy ozone, the atmospheric layer that helps protect against the sun's most harmful rays, and trap the earth's heat, contributing to a rise in average surface temperatures.

In theory, the ban should have helped both problems. But the countries that first signed the Montreal Protocol 17 years ago failed to recognize that CFC users would seek out the cheapest available alternative.

The chemicals that replaced CFCs are better for the ozone layer, but do little to help global warming. These chemicals, too, act as a reflective layer in the atmosphere that traps heat like a greenhouse.

Scientists blame CFCs for poking a huge, seasonal hole in the stratospheric ozone layer about seven miles to 14 miles over Antarctica.

Snipers Kill 20 Iraqis on Pilgrimage

Attack on Shiites occurs despite heavy security in Baghdad

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Snipers lurking on buildings and in a cemetery sprayed bullets into Shiite Muslim religious processions in the capital Sunday, killing at least 20 people in another spasm of sectarian bloodletting that many Iraqis fear is pushing them toward civil war.

About 300 people were injured, mostly when they fell while running to escape gunfire in Sunni Arab-dominated areas along the parade routes. In one neighborhood, gunmen hid behind tombstones at a Sunni cemetery.

"I was walking and someone got shot in front of me. It wasn't random fire; it was a clear sniper attack," said Mohammed Jassim, 32.

Women in black Islamic robes helped each other while running for cover. Many took refuge under an overpass, flinching in fear at the sound of each gunshot.

It was relatively quiet elsewhere in Iraq, with eight killings reported in other areas.

The snipings occurred despite heavy security imposed in Baghdad by Iraqi and U.S. forces as well as a weekend driving ban designed to prevent car bombings amid the tit-for-tat violence that Shiites and

Congolese President to Face Runoff

Kabila fails to win outright majority in landmark elections

KINSHASA, CONGO | President Joseph Kabila failed to win an outright majority in Congo's historic elections, setting up a runoff with a former rebel leader, election officials announced Sunday.

Kabila won 45 percent of the 16.9 million votes cast in the July 30 ballot against Jean-Pierre Bemba's 20 percent, Electoral Commission chief Apollinaire Malu Malu said at a news conference. The other votes were shared by 31 candidates.

Kabila

Bemba

The second round will likely come in late October, after any legal challenges are resolved and Congo's Supreme Court certifies the results. Turnout in the first round was about 70 percent.

U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan, whose 17,500 peacekeeping troops are helping oversee the voting process, hailed the elections as "a historic milestone in the peace process in the country."

But Kabila's personal security forces fought Bemba loyalists outside Congo's election commission headquarters Sunday in gunbattles that left at least one soldier dead.

Sporadic fighting continued in the capital, Kinshasa, even after the results were broadcast. Kemal Saiki, a U.N. spokesman, said at least one soldier loyal to Bemba had died.

Bemba, who led a rebel faction in Congo's 1996-2002 war, is a vice president in the national unity government and has polled strongly in Kinshasa. (AP)

71 Militants Die In Afghan Clashes

Six soldiers killed in fierce fighting across southern provinces

KANDAHAR, AFGHANISTAN | Afghan and NATO troops used rockets, planes and artillery in rolling battles with Taliban insurgents this weekend in Afghanistan's volatile south, leaving 71 militants and five Afghan soldiers dead in one of the bloodiest clashes since the 2001 U.S.-led invasion. A British soldier was killed in a separate attack.

The fierce fighting began late Saturday and continued into Sunday after the Taliban attacked a police convoy in Kandahar province's Panjwayi district, said Niaz Mohammad Sarhadi, the district government chief.

In the neighboring southern province of Helmand, a separate clash Sunday with insurgents left one British soldier dead and three others wounded, Britain's defense ministry said. The death brought to 20 the number of British soldiers killed since they deployed to Afghanistan in November 2001.

Militants also ambushed a police patrol in the western province of Farah, sparking a gunbattle that left one officer and two attackers dead, a regional governor said.

Afghanistan's southern provinces are bearing the brunt of the worst bout of violence since U.S.-led forces toppled the hard-line Taliban regime. Taliban holdouts and allied extremists have stepped up attacks in a bid to undermine the American-backed government of President Hamid Karzai.

In Panjwayi, NATO troops used artillery and aircraft to inflict "heavy casualties against Taliban fighters," an alliance statement said.

The bodies of 71 slain militants were found in three locations, scattered through orchards alongside their weapons, Sarhadi said. (AP)

New Votes Cast in Mexico

Closely watched state election held amid presidential dispute

TUXTLA GUTIERREZ, MEXICO | Mexico's young democracy was being tested again Sunday as voters in remote Indian villages and steamy coastal towns of Chiapas state chose a governor, in a tight race that threatened to inflame tensions over last month's disputed presidential elections.

Chiapas, home of the brief 1994 Zapatista uprising, is the latest battleground between Mexico's leftist party and President Vicente Fox's conservatives. Leftist Andres Manuel Lopez Obrador, who is sleeping in a protest tent in Mexico City's main plaza as he fights for the presidency, was closely watching the vote.

His party's candidate, Juan Sabines, said his victory would help stabilize the country. Political protests have had Mexico's capital and the southern city of Oaxaca under siege for more than a month.

Polls show Sabines, a 38-year-old lawyer, running neck-and-neck with Jose Antonio Aguilar Bodegas, a 56-year-old lawyer, of the Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI.

IN FOCUS: Gubernatorial candidate Juan Sabines, from the Democratic Revolution Party, casts his ballot during Chiapas' state election in Tuxtla Gutierrez on Sunday.

Fox's National Action Party, or PAN, withdrew its candidate and threw its support behind Aguilar. It was the first time the PAN has formed an alliance with the PRI since Fox ended the PRI's 71-year hold on the presidency in 2000.

Many fear a loss by Lopez Obrador's Democratic Revolution Party, or PRD, could spark confrontations in Mexico's poorest state. Since the Zapatista uprising, there has been sporadic violence between radical members of the political parties.

"Chiapas is a point of influence for other states, and for that reason we must be more aware of who we vote for, and we have to pray that everything turns out well," said Victoria Anta Carrillo, 64, among the first to arrive at the polls.

In the July 2 presidential race, PAN candidate Felipe Calderon has a slight advantage over Lopez Obrador. Lopez Obrador has alleged fraud and his supporters are blocking the heart of Mexico City in a protest demanding that electoral judges grant a total recount. (AP)

Iran Plans to Respond To U.N. Nuke Package

But Tehran insists it won't halt disputed enrichment program

TEHRAN, IRAN | Iran said Sunday that it will offer a "multifaceted response" Tuesday to a Western package of incentives aimed at persuading Tehran to rein in its nuclear program, but insisted it won't suspend uranium enrichment altogether.

Speaking after Iran's military test-fired 10 short-range missiles, Foreign Ministry spokesman Hamid Reza Asefi said at a news conference that a nuclear compromise would have to be reached during future negotiations.

"Everything has to come out of negotiations," Asefi said. "Suspension is not on our agenda."

The U.N. Security Council passed a resolution last month calling for Iran to suspend uranium enrichment by Aug. 31 or face the threat of sanctions.

Earlier, Iran's state-run television reported the test-firing of 10 surface-to-surface Saegheh missiles Sunday, a day after military exercises began in the country. (AP)

Militia Claims Ethiopian Troops Enter Somalia

NAIROBI, KENYA | Officials with the Islamic militia controlling much of southern Somalia alleged that Ethiopian troops had arrived in the country Sunday to bolster Somalia's weak, U.N.-backed government.

The charge could not immediately be confirmed but showed the continuing tensions between the militia and the government.

Two militia officials said on condition of anonymity that an unknown number of troops crossed the border before dawn on their way to Baidoa, where President Abdullahi Yusuf's transitional government is based. (AP)

LEGAL BRAID: Virginia hair braiders are awaiting word on whether Gov. Kaine will sign legislation creating licensing regulations for them. If, in the next few weeks, he does, Virginia will become one of nine states that has special licenses for braiders.

Loopholes Aid Md. Gov. Race Funds

Contributors to both candidates find ways to circumvent the law

BALTIMORE | Maryland's two candidates for governor have raised a record $24 million, with millions more expected before the general election — in part because supporters have found ways to sidestep contribution limits.

According to state law, donors may not give more than $4,000 to a candidate for state office and cannot donate more than $10,000 overall to state candidates during a four-year election cycle.

But wealthy donors are using numerous strategies — all of them apparently legal — that allow them to make virtually unlimited contributions.

Donors are giving through multiple companies or to state and federal campaign accounts controlled by state parties that then shift the money back to candidates.

"It's a joke," said Bobbie Walton, executive director of Common Cause Maryland and who has called for an overhaul of the state's campaign finance rules. "There's always one more way to take money that is under the control ... of an individual and allow them to double or exponentially increase their contributions."

Campaign finance records released last week show that Republican Gov. Robert Ehrlich received $470,000 from a federal account created by the Maryland Republican Party, which used the money to buy services for his campaign — including salaries, office equipment and postage.

Elections officials say the practice is legal. (AP)

Police Targeting Students With Anti-Crime Tips

WASHINGTON | As a citywide crime emergency continues, police are urging college students to take responsibility for their safety — both on campus and in neighborhoods.

The Metropolitan Police Department is handing out a campus-safety booklet that urges students to lock up laptop computers, electronic devices, bicycles and other valuable belongings.

Students also are urged to protect themselves from violent crime, such as robberies or sexual assaults, by walking in groups and staying in well-lit areas at night.

Police are discouraging students from wearing expensive clothing or jewelry on or off campus. (AP)

Man Resisting Arrest Dies After Officers Subdue Him

Authorities say a man behaving erratically on a street died after being subdued by police officers. The man was walking on Ager Road on Saturday, disrupting traffic. He was ordered out of the street by a police officer, but didn't respond. Authorities said two passing transit police officers stopped to help the officer take the man into custody. But the man resisted — and was wrestled to the ground and placed in handcuffs. While waiting for an ambulance, the man stopped breathing and the officers took off the handcuffs and began CPR. The man was taken to the hospital, where he was pronounced dead. (AP)

Jewelry Store Employee Is Shot During Daylight Heist

A jewelry store worker was critically wounded Sunday after being shot during a brazen afternoon robbery in Georgetown. Police inspector Andy Solberg said at least two men entered Georgetown Fine Jewelry and asked to see some merchandise. Shots were then fired and the assailants fled. Police said the victim remains hospitalized after being struck in the back. (AP)

Burn Victim Gets New Car

Free vehicle from Va. dealership will help Cade spread message

FALLS CHURCH, VA. | Domestic violence victim Yvette Cade could find it easier to deliver her message of survival as a result of a gift from a car dealership. Cade, who was critically burned last year when she was doused with gasoline and set afire by her estranged husband, no longer has to rely on public transportation.

The owners of Don Beyer Volvo gave her the keys to a 2007 Volvo S-40 yesterday. The dealership made the donation so Cade would not have to depend on others to get around.

Cade is still recovering from injuries she suffered in the attack. She continues to make public appearances to urge victims of domestic violence to get out of abusive relationships.

Cade's former husband was convicted in April. Roger Hargrave is serving a life prison sentence for attempted murder and assault. (AP)

Players Living Large

It's strange to see the team living on the football edge. The Maxwell family, which has owned the team since 1982, always has been conservative when it comes to spending money on players.

But they showed their wild side with the signing of Ty Plowshack, handing the former all pro player a three-year, $30 million contract, including a $2 million signing bonus and a $4.5 million roster bonus. The craziness hasn't stopped. Plowshack's eagerness has infiltrated the locker room. He installed a fish tank by his locker for his teammates. He persuaded the Maxwells to switch to yellow helmets.

Pistol Drew Robinson's contract holdout was a downer as the team opened camp, but Plowshack hasn't allowed it to effect the team chemistry. As one of football's strange birds, he keeps the locker room loose with his outgoing personality.

"I'm working on a new end zone dance, so get ready for some good laughs," Plowshack said. "Make sure that you write down that I'm taking break, rap dancing lessons." [See Player, Page D6]

Team Concept Is Tight

On Saturday morning, at the precise moment coach Stewie McEwen blew his whistle to commence the practice, the skies opened up and gave everyone a refreshing break.

Two or three minutes into the storm, an angry McEwen grudgingly conceded to the weather and hustled his team into the newly constructed dome stadium.

Asked about the sudden change in practice plans, safety Talon Michaels responded the way he does to most questions.

He laughed.

"To the team, it doesn't really effect us," said Michaels. "Preseason. Regular season. Playoffs. Sun or rain. It's nothing we ain't seen before. Put me out on the field and I'm R-T-G: ready to go."

CLIPPED: China plans to start regulating video on the Internet following a surge in satirical items in which real film clips are remade into mocking send-ups. Video spoofs are so popular that Chinese people have even coined a new slang term, "egao," to describe the act.

Move Over, MySpace

Popular Korean social site Cyworld is set to tackle the U.S. market

NETWORKS | Acorns, cartoon alter egos and bubble-gum kitsch may not seem like the most intimidating weapons for a cultural invasion, but those are the tools Henry Chon is brandishing.

The chief executive of Cyworld Inc. is hoping to translate the hugely popular Korean Web site Cyworld.com into a hip destination for American teens and 20-somethings.

"Once Americans see the value of Cyworld, they'll make sure their friends and family use it," said Chon, who keeps photos of his daughter, Chloe, on his Cyworld home page.

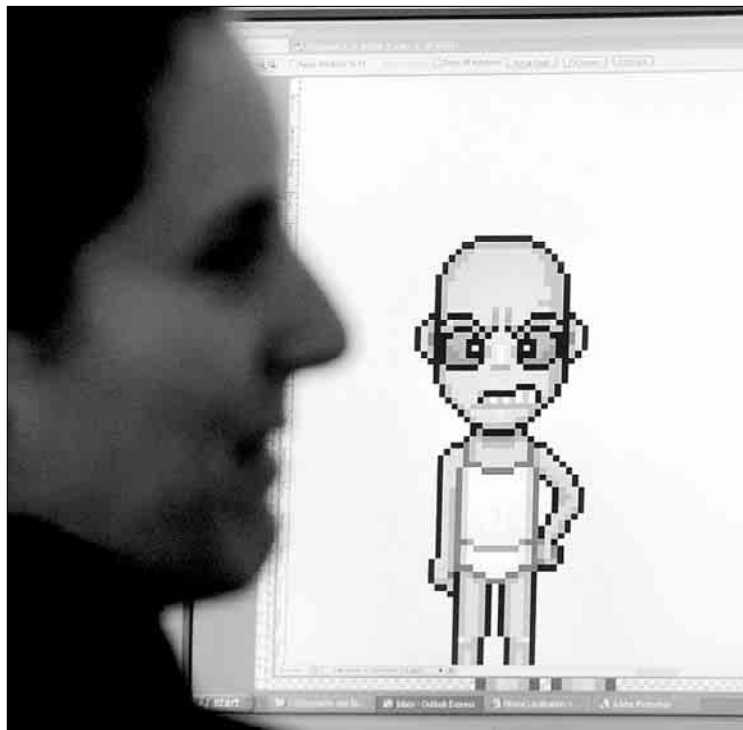

But as a U.S. version of the site launched Tuesday, critics question how an Asian company with fewer than 30 U.S. employees can compete with the likes of News Corp.'s MySpace, which has more than 100 million member profiles, and Facebook, which is popular with high school and college students.

A phenomenon in South Korea, where one in three has an account and nine out of 10 residents ages 24 to 29 are members, Cyworld has a futuristic look and an unusual business model.

MySpace and other popular networking sites allow users to publish home pages that convey information about the user's real-world hobbies and daily routines. The goal is to put users in touch with other people — friends or strangers — who share similar interests.

By contrast, Cyworld is a parallel universe unto itself. It combines aspects of "simulated reality" computer games such as Electronic Arts Inc.'s SimCity with massively multiplayer online games that have thousands of players facing off in what's known as a "persistent world."

But Cyworld isn't a game; the goal is to socialize with "cybuddies."

The centerpiece of Cyworld is the avatar — a member's virtual alter ego, a cartoon character who assumes the clothes, hairstyle and hobbies of the member's choosing. Avatars visit one another in forums dedicated to things such as cooking or rock climbing. They occupy three-dimensional "minihomes," decorated with virtual art and furniture.

Cyworld's virtual economy centers on the dotori — Korean for "acorn" — with which members purchase furnishings for their minihomes and clothes or music for their avatars. Members buy dotori with credit cards or cash at convenience stores.

Unlike U.S. sites, Cyworld emphasizes relationships between relatives, friends and co-workers — people who have already met but yearn to also hang out online.

Of course, Americans can have profiles at multiple networking sites, and Cyworld's deep-pocketed backers in Seoul are hopeful that Americans will at least check it out. RACHEL KONRAD (AP)

LOSING A LEFTY: Mets southpaw Tom Glavine could face the sudden end of his career, depending on the results of a blood-clot test in his pitching shoulder. "I've had a great career," Glavine said. The Mets put their other ace, Pedro Martinez, on the DL just last week.

Woods Dominates in 12th Major Win

Tiger matches his own scoring record at PGA, finishing at 18-under

GOLF | No tears, no sweat. One month after an emotional victory in the British Open, Tiger Woods won the PGA Championship with a ruthless display of efficiency Sunday, closing with a 4-under 68 for a five-shot victory and his 12th career major.

Woods started with a 10-foot birdie to seize the lead. He finished with a tap-in par to match his scoring record at the PGA Championship, finishing at 18-under 270 and walking off the 18th green with a broad smile.

"This is sweet. This is really sweet," he said.

He now has won his last three tournaments, the first time he has done that in five years. And he became the first player in history to go consecutive years winning at least two majors.

Each one moves him that much closer to the 18 majors Jack Nicklaus compiled over 25 years. Woods is at a dozen after only 10 years on the PGA Tour, and there doesn't appear to be anyone capable of stopping him.

"He's just too good," said Shaun Micheel, who won the battle for second place. "Unless you're at the top of your game, you just can't play with him."

Luke Donald was tied for the lead going into the final round at Medinah but closed with a 74 to finish in a tie for third at 12-under 276 with Adam Scott (67) and Garcia (70).

It was the fifth major that Woods won by at least five shots. He now has won his 12 majors by a combined 56 shots, while Nicklaus won his 18 majors by 44 shots.

U.S. Keeps Rolling at Worlds

With 26 points from Wade, America routs China in 30-point win

BASKETBALL | One day Carmelo Anthony leads the U.S. in scoring. The next game it's Dwyane Wade's turn.

Wade scored 26 points on Sunday night to lead the U.S. to a 121-90 rout of Yao Ming and China, the Americans' second victory at the FIBA world championships.

Someone else may lead the way against Slovenia on Tuesday.

This is how the Americans were assembled. Unlike many teams in the world championships, they don't have to rely on one or two stars to carry the scoring load.

"We have to be unselfish because of the caliber of players that we have," captain LeBron James said. "There's no reason for us to be selfish. Guys can make shots. Guys can make plays at any given moment of the game. I go out there to be unselfish and it kind of rubs off on everybody else. That's the kind of team that we have."

The Americans have averaged 116 points against lightweights Puerto Rico and China. And they haven't relied on any single player.

On Sunday, Wade had 26 points on 9-of-13 shooting. And he didn't even start. ANDREW BAGNATO (AP)

No One Can Catch Kenseth in Mich.

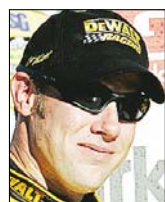

Win virtually assures No. 17 of spot in Chase for the championship

AUTO RACING | Matt Kenseth held off Jeff Gordon this time.

Kenseth easily kept the four-time NASCAR champion at bay in the final laps of Sunday's Nextel Cup race at Michigan International Speedway and won for the third time this season.

The finish lacked the drama of last month's duel in Chicago, when Gordon caught Kenseth and then spun him out of his way to race on by for the victory.

Kenseth

And although Gordon appeared to have a faster car at the end this time — he charged from 12th place on a restart with 36 laps to go in the 200-lap race — he ran out of time and finished 10 car lengths behind Kenseth's No. 17 Roush Racing Ford.

"I wish we had a few more laps," Gordon said. "I needed maybe three more and I would have been on his bumper. I would have liked to show him and everybody else I know how to pass him clean." Kenseth solidified his hold on second place in the Cup standings, and is now just 58 points behind leader Jimmie Johnson.

Johnson overcame a flat tire on the second lap of the race to finish 13th. He and Kenseth have all but clinched their spots in the 10-race Chase for the championship with only three races remaining.

A STEP BACK: Coach Joe Gibbs watches as his team falls to the Jets on Saturday. Gibbs said the offensive showing was "very poor" and criticized the run defense.

Gibbs Upset After 2nd Poor Showing

One day after latest preseason loss, coach is still noticeably angry

REDSKINS | Joe Gibbs was peeved. He had the look and sound of a coach who had just lost by four touchdowns late in the regular season, yet this was only an exhibition game in August.

It's what happens when a team with high expectations starts the preseason with a pair of stinkers.

Gibbs has had his low moments since returning from retirement in 2004, yet he was as terse and agitated Saturday night as he's been following any regular-season game. His news conference lasted two minutes, 45 seconds — very short by NFL standards — but it might as well have been 20 seconds because he kept repeating the same thoughts: "We need to take a serious look at all this. ... I haven't done my job. ... It was across the board."

On Sunday, Gibbs had calmed down only a bit.

"We gave up a lot of yards rushing. ... Our third downs were 3-for-11, very poor. ... I thought we would get a great effort playing extremely hard coming home, and we play a game like that," he said.

The losses sting more than usual because coaches and players have set a higher standard for this year's team. Any early sign that this group might not be marching on its way to the land of Super Bowl contenders is a cause for alarm that must be addressed immediately.

"He knows we can play better, and he's upset," quarterback Mark Brunell said. JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

Phillies Batter Nats, 12-10

Nationals lose another series after falling way behind in early innings

NATIONALS | Abraham Nunez homered and tied a career high with four RBIs to help the Philadelphia Phillies hold on for a 12-10 victory over the Washington Nationals on Sunday.

Nunez had three hits, Aaron Rowand went 4-for-5 and scored three times and Mike Lieberthal homered for the Phillies, who led 10-1 after four innings.

Philadelphia has won two straight and remains 2 1/2 games behind Cincinnati in the NL wild-card race. The Phillies went 6-4 on their homestand and begin a 10-game trip on Monday against the Chicago Cubs.

Brandon Harper homered twice and drove in four runs for the Nationals, who have lost two straight and three of their last four.

Washington cut the deficit to

BATTERED AND BEATEN: Nationals starting pitcher Pedro Astacio (3-3) was rocked by the Phillies lineup. He allowed seven runs and six hits in less than three innings.

11-10 in the eighth behind Brian Schneider's two-run double off Aaron Fultz. But Fultz recovered to strike out Marlon Anderson with two runners on to end the threat.

Philadelphia battered Nationals starter Pedro Astacio (3-3) for seven runs and six hits in two-plus innings. Astacio was coming off a two-hit shutout against Atlanta on Tuesday.

Washington committed five errors. (AP)

Halladay Nearly Perfect Against O's

ORIOLES | Sixteen batters, 16 outs. As Roy Halladay got deeper in the game, the Baltimore Orioles began to wonder if they'd ever manage a hit off Toronto's ace.

"He had me worried there for a while that we might not get one," Orioles manager Sam Perlozzo said, "but he kind of tired a bit."

Although rookie Brandon Fahey ended the no-hit bid with a one-out single in the sixth inning, Halladay earned his major league-leading 16th win, leading the Blue Jays to a 9-2 victory Sunday.

Halladay (16-3) allowed two runs, four hits and a walk in seven innings, striking out two.

Miguel Tejada hit his 22nd homer for the Orioles, whose season-high four-game winning streak ended. Baltimore scored 34 runs in its previous three games before being held to five hits by Halladay and relievers Jeremy Accardo and B.J. Ryan.

Bedard (12-9) gave up seven runs, five earned, and seven hits in five innings. DAVID GINSBURG (AP)

Sun Sets on Mystics' Best Season

Last-second 3-point attempt fails as team is swept from playoffs

WNBA | Katie Douglas scored 16 points for Connecticut and Washington's Alana Beard missed a 3-point attempt in the final seconds, allowing the Sun to hold on for a 68-65 victory Sunday and advance to the Eastern Conference finals for the fourth straight season.

Washington's season came to a close after winning a franchise-high 18 games during the regular season. But the Mystics couldn't stop Connecticut in either playoff game, and finished the year with two straight losses.

Taj McWilliams-Franklin put up 12 points and 14 rebounds for the Sun, who will play Detroit in the Eastern Conference finals.

The Sun seemed to have the game won, leading 63-53 in the fourth quarter. Then Washington went on a 12-3 run to end the game, capped when Beard stole an inbounds pass and hit a layup with 10 seconds left.

But Lindsay Whalen hit two free throws, and Beard missed the 3-pointer that would have tied it with just three seconds remaining, allowing Connecticut to run out the clock. Whalen finished with 15 points, including eight free throws.

Beard led Washington with 21 points and nine rebounds, and Nikki Teasley added 16 points, but scored just six after the first quarter.

Washington, which shot only 32 percent from the floor, committed 32 personal fouls. Chasity Melvin fouled out, and Crystal Robinson, Coco Miller and Delisha Milton-Jones each had five personals. (AP)

Katie Douglas, center, slashes her way to the basket, helping the Suns win.

Roddick Wins 1st Tourney in More Than a Year

TENNIS | Andy Roddick won his first title in more than a year, an emphatic 6-3, 6-4 victory over Spain's Juan Carlos Ferrero in the final of the Western & Southern Financial Group Masters on Sunday that completed his impressive weeklong comeback from injury and futility.

The last time Roddick won the event was in 2003, when the momentum carried him to a U.S. Open title a few weeks later. He dominated Ferrero with his serve to win that title, and did it again to win their rematch on Sunday. (AP)

BOX OFFICE VENOM? "Snakes on a Plane" was the No. 1 movie last weekend, but New Line Cinema may be displeased with the $15.25 million the fan-buzz-driven thriller made: "Talladega Nights" made almost as much, and it's been open three weeks.

Mad About the Band

Tony Consiglio finds humor in a boy band's 'mature older' fans

EASY TARGETS | Writer and illustrator Tony Consiglio is obsessed with collecting action figures.

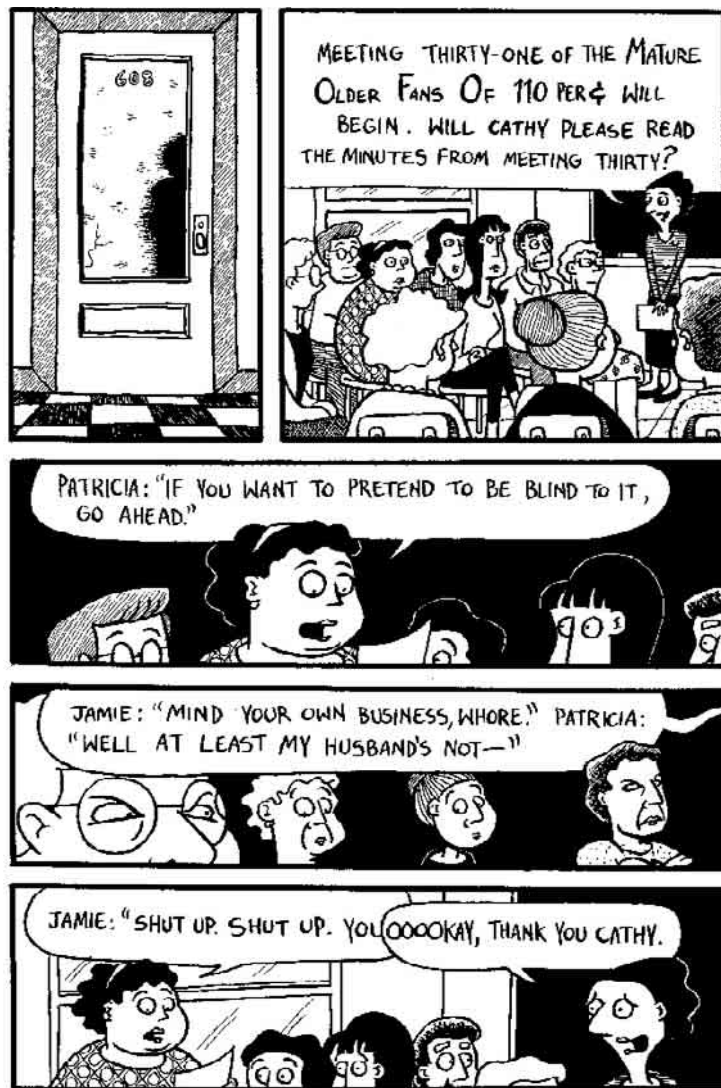

But that is nothing compared with the obsessive behavior of the lead characters of his new graphic novel, "100 Per¢" — three fanatical housewives. Cathy, Gerty and Sasha love 100 Per¢, a boy band. They attend meetings of "The Mature Older Fans of 100 Per¢" and discuss the group's private lives with aplomb more frequently exhibited by 12-year-olds. While the story's imaginary, it's based on true stories.

Wait. People like this exist?

I knew a woman. She was part of a group of women over 40 that met and were fans of the Backstreet Boys. It was hysterical. I went once and ... I cannot do justice to what I saw at this meeting ... There was one woman who literally was leaving her family to follow this group.

Would you call this abnormal?

I don't know if it's abnormal. If a 40-year-old woman likes the Backstreet Boys, it would be one thing, but to follow the lives of these people and to try and collect everything that has their name on it, that just seems a little anti-social or something. ... I guess any kind of obsessing is a little abnormal.

WARPED TOUR: Consiglio examines the effects of obsession through a band's fans.

Do you have any ambition to write superheroes?

No, I have no interest in superheroes. I think I read "The Death of Superman." That was the only superhero comic I ever read in my life. And I read "Watchmen." I grew up on Mad magazine, Bunny and the Flintstones.

For more of our conversation with Consiglio, visit readexpress.com

So do you want to work for Mad?

Up until maybe college, that's what I was honing my skills for. ... Every time I finished a short story or something, I would send it out to Mad magazine. Like clockwork, I would get a rejection letter from them. As time passed, and I started doing my mini-comics, I realized Mad magazine was looking more and more sophomoric. ... I don't think I'd want to work for Mad magazine. Don't they have like advertisements in it now? Piece of junk. I don't know why they don't just stop publishing that thing.

HIL ST. SOUL Soul Asylum

Up-and-comer Hilary Mwelwa's band, Hil St. Soul, traffics in uplifting, lightly funky, beautifully sung soul and R&B tunes. The Brits hit Alexandria tonight — part of a short tour supporting the new LP, "Soulified." → Birchmere Music Hall, 3701 Mt. Vernon Ave., Alexandria; with Governor, 7:30 p.m., $35; 703-549-7500.

DANIEL MENA 45 Minutes of Fame

Chilean painter Daniel Mena doesn't obscure Andy Warhol's influence on his work: Mena's realist portraits of beautiful people (including Jessica Simpson) superimposed on '60s-style backgrounds such as plaids, polka dots and atomic energy symbols. The 20-something pop artist — already a celeb in his imagination — has gained considerable renown in Chile. His paintings — like the media, consumer and popular cultures they reflect — make every effort to titillate. → Embassy of Chile, 1732 Massachusetts Ave. NW; through Sept. 1; 202-530-4118, chile-usa.org. (Dupont Circle)

BUCK HILL AT BLUES ALLEY Two Institutions

D.C. jazz great Buck Hill, 80, takes the stage at Blues Alley, the area's most acclaimed jazz club. Expect the saxophonist to play cuts from his new album, "Relax" — the first he's recorded as a band leader in 15 years. → Blues Alley, 1073 Wisconsin Ave. NW; 8 & 10 p.m., $18; 202-337-4141.

On her new CD, Kelis evokes Joan Jett, then shares a cosmic trip with Cee-Lö.

A Hip-Pop Rock Star

Kelis embraces sonic versatility, but sorely lacks lyrical variety

FUSION | Versatility is not the skill most valued in the pop game. On her new album (in stores Tuesday), Kelis, the rhyming chanteuse who turned eclecticism into a brand, can't decide whether to buck the game or play it.

"I'm a rock hip-hop pop star," she snarls, but she's not above self-im-tation, especially when it comes to following up "Milkshake," the song that made her a chart-topper in '03. This album's first single, "Bossy," is a catchy recapitulation of that hit's jump-rope rhythm and "oh, snap!" attitude. Every up-tempo number included here represents her as a claw-baring vixen. It's unfortunate; Kelis is much more, as the less-in-your-face tracks here prove.

There's a lot of Anita Baker in Kelis' smoky voice, but her appetite is pure Prince — polyglot and healthfully perverse. From hip-hop she gets a casual attitude toward artistic crossbreeding; unlike most of her peers, however, she presents a personality that's as multiform as her music.

Few artists could line up an ode to bondage right next to a love song so sweet that it could be played at a wedding. That's what Kelis does here. It'll be a shame if she lets the hardness that sold her become her main public face. ANN POWERS (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

Metal Speaking Out

A new headbanging vanguard rises, with something to say

BEYOND HEDONISM | Heavy metal singer Chris Barnes didn't know what people would think of "Amerika the Brutal," an anti-war song he wrote after his cousin was deployed to Iraq in 2003.

He heard a number of complaints — but also received supportive e-mails from American troops in the war zone. "It kind of sent a shiver up my spine, because those are the guys I didn't want to offend by sounding anti-war," said Barnes, vocalist for the death-metal band Six Feet Under.

Other metal bands are finding similar inspiration.

Lamb of God's albums criticize American foreign policy. Cattle Decapitation are ardent vegetarians who use explicit album covers and songs like "Veal and the Cult of Torture" to condemn the meat industry. Serj Tankian of System of a Down is co-founder of a non-profit organization that works on social issues.

More than three decades after Black Sabbath conjured images of the dark arts, heavy metal is growing up. The genre is increasingly incorporating social and political messages into its dense power chords.

Cattle Decapitation vocalist Travis Ryan said his San Diego band's mix of charging guitars and an animal-rights message is drawing a diverse crowd that includes activists as well as traditional metal fans.

"We've always had a lot of crazy crossover going on," he said before a recent show. "It's a pretty diverse crowd we have. I've never known what to make of it."

"Metal is expanding and evolving and becoming more diverse," said Canadian anthropologist and filmmaker Sam Dunn, who directed "Metal: A Headbanger's Journey," released on DVD this summer. "It's at a much more vibrant state than it was even five or 10 years ago."

Dunn is working on a sequel to the film with the working title "Global Metal" that will trace the popularity of metal overseas, especially in developing countries like Brazil, Columbia and Indonesia.

Metal artists "have responded to the culture and politics of the day," said Donna Gaines, a sociologist and author of "Teenage Wasteland," a study of working-class New Jersey metalheads.

Metal music in the 1980s was often homophobic and "very white," she said, but current bands tend to be socially conscious and suspicious of political power. There's also more women in the audience — and fronting the bands.

"This is another generation rising," Gaines said.

Backstage Upheaval Roils ABC

The network's latest drama is taking place in the boardrooms

POWER STRUGGLE | If the scripts for ABC's new fall drama "Brothers & Sisters" are as good as the behind-the-scenes intrigue surrounding the show, the network might have a hit on its hands.

Last week, executive producer Marti Noxon abruptly quit, a decision people familiar with the situation say was due to creative differences with series creator Jon Robin Baitz.

The defection of Noxon, who as the "showrunner" was the producer responsible for day-to-day supervision of the series, casts a cloud over "Brothers," which debuts next month and stars Calista Flockhart as a New York talk-show host drawn back to her extended family in Southern California.

To fill the gap, Walt Disney Co.-owned Touchstone Television has tapped writer-producer Greg Berlanti to help out with scripts and production management.

His new role raises the possibility that Berlanti might permanently take the reins on "Brothers," which would in turn heighten doubts about the level of control retained by Baitz and another executive producer, Ken Olin. SCOTT COLLINS (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

'Toons on the Console

Animated films make the leap onto interactive screens

VIDEO GAMES | Remember when computer animation seemed like a novelty? It was barely a decade ago when “Toy Story” first dazzled audiences and changed Hollywood’s approach to cartoons. Now it seems like there’s a new animated feature film every other week.

Accompanying those movies has been a flood of video games, no doubt targeting the same parents who are desperate to keep the kids busy during the long summer months.

Most 'toon-based games are fairly enjoyable, and parents can be confident that young players won't be exposed to any cursing or graphic violence. But it's hard for a grown-up gamer to get excited about a game based on "Monster House" or "Barnyard." Then again, you might be surprised by how good some of these games are.

MONSTER HOUSE (FOR GAME BOY): This is one of the most enjoyable releases for Nintendo's aging handheld in a long time. On each floor of the house, you're attacked by possessed household objects, which you can fight with your water gun or stun with your camera flash. Each of the three kids from the film has different talents — DJ can climb, Chowder can lift heavy things and Jenny can squeeze through tight spaces. You have to discover the secrets of each level before moving to the next.

AT TEASE: There isn't much plot, but there's plenty to see on the "Barnyard" farm.

BARNYARD (FOR PLAYSTATION 2, GAMECUBE): In “Barnyard,” you are the new cow on the block, the latest addition to a freaky farm where the critters walk on two legs, talk, play practical jokes and indulge in other humanoid shenanigans. There’s not much of a plot; characters from the movie ask you to help out with their chores, whether they’re chasing off raccoons, rounding up baby chicks or harassing the mailman. It’s kind of like “Grand Theft Tractor.” The graphics are crisp and colorful, the controls are easy to learn and there’s a ton of stuff to do.

THE ANT BULLY (FOR PLAYSTATION 2, GAMECUBE): "The Ant Bully" is a drab, repetitive bore in which the human boy Lucas fights the same pill bugs, spiders and wasps over and over again. More irritating is the constant hectoring of the ants, who are always nagging you about the importance of teamwork, even though you're the only one who's getting anything done. LOU KESTEN (AP)

LADIES' NIGHT: "Ally McBeal" pixie Jane Krakowski will join the cast of Tina Fey's "30 Rock" this fall as the star of a suspiciously "Saturday Night Live"-like sketch-comedy show. "SNL" alum Rachel Dratch plays the show's most versatile performer.

Out of the Storm

Spike Lee's haunting film plays 'Taps' for a lost New Orleans

VOICES | It isn't far into HBO's "When the Levees Broke" (9 p.m., conclusion airs Tuesday) that then-FEMA chief Michael Brown declares, "We are ready, we are going to respond." He is speaking to CNN one day before Hurricane Katrina struck New Orleans.

Directed by Spike Lee, "When the Levees Broke: A Requiem in Four Acts" frames the tragedy that unfolded as a morality play.

ed, from figures such as Mayor Ray Nagin and Louisiana Gov. Kathleen Blanco, to activists like Al Sharpton and Harry Belafonte, to traumatized residents of the flooded Ninth Ward District. The Louis Armstrong classic, "Do You Know What It Means to Miss New Orleans," is heard as the film begins. Lee means for viewers not to miss any of the devastation and neglect.

Speaking of disasters, "On Native Soil: The Documentary of the 9/11 Commission Report" (10 p.m., Court TV) captures the events of that terrible day as well as the nation's civilian and government response. Created with the support and involvement of 9/11 victims' families, the film includes never-before-seen interviews with family members. FRAZIER MOORE (AP)

ON TV TONIGHT

THE BIG CONS ARE BACK
PRISON BREAK (8 p.m., Fox) makes its second-season debut tonight with Lincoln and Michael splitting off from the very large group of escapees while TV mainstay William Fichtner chases them.

BUT WAIT, THERE'S MORE
If that isn't heart-pounding action enough, stay tuned for the premiere of VANISHED (9 p.m., Fox), a new procedural that looks like all the old procedurals, except it follows the investigation of one crime over the course of the season.

DECLAWED
THE CHEETAH GIRLS (8 p.m., Disney) The Spice Girls come back as an American tween quartet in this 2003 TV movie based on the popular book series, and there is much to learn about self-esteem and girl power, if you can stand the saccharin.

ON THE RUN: The brothers get out—but for how long?—on "Prison Break."

HOW MUCH KEROSENE?
With help from BARBECUE UNIVERSITY WITH STEVE RAICHLEN (8 p.m., PBS), it's not too late in the summer to pick up grilling tips. ARION BERGER (EXPRESS)

Japan's government tries to breed more fledgling legal eagles

In past years, 25-year-old law school graduate Hiroyuki Ichikawa would have been facing an almost impossible task — a bar exam with a 97 percent failure rate. Now, his chances are closer to 50-50.

In the most sweeping reform of Japan's legal system since World War II, the doors are opening wide for a flood of new lawyers, prosecutors and judges to handle criminal and civil cases in an increasingly litigious society. Experts say the reforms are long overdue and underscore a big shift in social attitudes that is forcing Japan to change its long-standing policy of keeping the number of lawyers low and the public out of the courts.

"People are beginning to take more and more of their troubles to court," said Hideaki Kubori, a corporate lawyer and a professor at Omiya Law School outside Tokyo.

Japan has roughly 22,000 lawyers — one for every 5,790 people, compared with one for every 268 in the U.S. Under the old bar exam, to be scrapped in 2011, fewer than 1,500 people are allowed to pass every year. In the United States, with about twice Japan's population, the number is closer to 75,000.

“Verbal abuses and other acts that amount to human rights violations occur all the time.”

MASASHI AKITA
CRIMINAL DEFENSE LAWYER

To fill the vacuum, the government has decided to more than double the number of legal professionals, including lawyers, prosecutors and judges, to 50,000 by 2018. Juries for serious criminal cases will be introduced in 2009 to ease the load on judges. The first U.S.-style law school opened in 2004 and, with government encouragement, Japan now has 72 of them.

Previously, university law departments tended to focus on the academic or theoretical side of the law. The new schools concentrate on practical training and preparing students to specialize. Their graduates are exempt from the old exam, and instead take one written specifically for them.

Lawyers Wanted

Economic necessity is the driving force.

Kubori noted that, for example, filings for personal bankruptcy have jumped more than fivefold over 10 years, to 219,402 in 2004. Inheritance and divorce disputes are also increasingly finding their way to court.

More important, business leaders have been campaigning for a bigger pool of lawyers specializing in tax law and intellectual property as legal discussions surrounding those issues become ever more complicated.

Less certain is whether the reforms will fix Japan's often-criticized penal justice system.

Cases often drag on for years and conviction rates are higher than 99 percent due to a system weighted heavily in favor of prosecutors, who have superior resources and status. The shortage of lawyers — especially to defend criminals — has long been a target of criticism. Defense lawyers are widely perceived as protectors of the public's enemies and are often poorly paid.

The introduction of juries, giving ordinary Japanese citizens their first chance to participate in criminal court procedures, may change that balance when it takes effect.

But defense lawyers warn the reform will not necessarily answer allegations of human rights violations and false charges that result from forced confessions with no lawyer present. They also stress that pretrial access to their clients will remain tightly restricted.

"Unlike other countries, check mechanisms by lawyers are basically nonexistent in Japan because they cannot witness interrogations," said Masashi Akita, a criminal defense lawyer. "Verbal abuses and other acts that amount to human rights violations occur all the time."

Freshly graduated Ichikawa knows the odds will remain stacked against the defenders, and, therefore, wants to specialize in corporate law for now. KANA INAGAKI (AP)

Bridges Have It Covered

History

Exhibit celebrates bridges found beyond Madison County

They are icons of the horse-and-buggy past, simple structures that helped a young nation expand its road system.

Two hundred years after they began dotting the countryside, the country's covered bridges have one plank in the past and one in the present. Beloved as picturesque throwbacks, many remain vital transportation links in rural communities from Vermont to Oregon.

Now, the Smithsonian Institution is celebrating them with a traveling exhibit that traces the history of an institution that holds a unique place in the hearts — and communities — of America.

"In the 21st century, we think of covered bridges as these quaint relics of the past," said Katherine

“What they were, in their time, were remarkable achievements in civil engineering.”

KATHERINE KRILE
SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION

Krile, project director for the Smithsonian's traveling exhibit series. "What they were, in their time, were remarkable achievements in civil engineering. They helped push forward the growth of the U.S. for over a century."

"Covered Bridges: Spanning the American Landscape" uses historical photographs, schematic drawings and other paraphernalia to bring the structures to life, showcasing not only their importance as river passages but also the appeal they continue to hold as cultural icons.

America didn't invent the covered bridge; it just helped perfect it.

Wooden bridges date to the time of Julius Caesar, who is said to have built a timber pile bridge over the Rhine River in 55 B.C.

The Windsor-Cornish bridge spans the Connecticut River in Cornish, N.H.

Covered bridges evolved as a way of preventing bridge decks from rotting from exposure to the braces, posts and trusses that supported them. By 1870, there were an estimated 10,000.

Invincible, they weren't. Prone to arson fires and vulnerable to floods, the bridges' usefulness faded with the development of more sophisticated techniques and the evolution of the automobile in the 20th century.

As the bridges began disappearing in the mid-20th century, their cachet grew. Advertisers used covered bridge icons, paint companies marketed colors like "covered bridge red" and aficionados built replicas on golf courses and elsewhere.

"Aesthetically, they pack a great punch," said David Wright, president of the National Society for the Preservation of Covered Bridges. "And they're useful structures, relatively easy to repair."

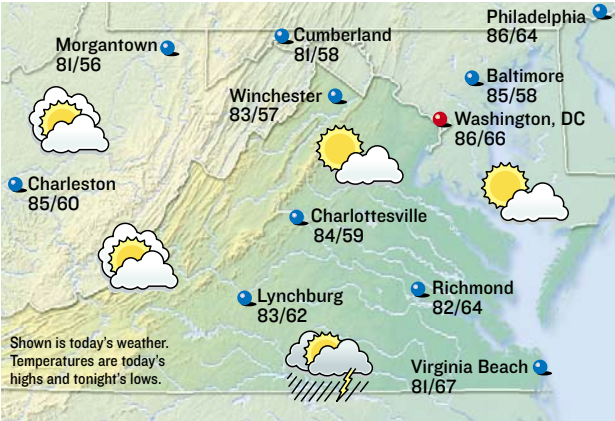

Today, about 750 remain, with the biggest concentration in Pennsylvania. Vermont has about 80, though not all are still in use. Among them: the Windsor-Cornish bridge, a 460-foot-long span over the Connecticut River that links Vermont and New Hampshire.

Built in 1866, the bridge remains in operation, and continues to draw visitors. The warning sign — "Walk Your Horses or Pay Two Dollars Fine" — still adorns the entrance, even though traffic today is automotive. JOHN CURRAN (AP)

Fashionable Flats

High-end New York apartments getting designer makeovers

Designer hotels are old news. Karl Lagerfeld, Todd Oldham, Vera Wang, Betsey Johnson and Heatherette are just a few of the folks who have designed hotel interiors.

But residential designer apartment buildings? That's a new trend.

No longer content to simply make their mark designing clothing and accessories, a trio of fashion's finest are taking their vision one step further by putting their stylish stamp on co-ops, condos and rental apartments, thereby ensuring that fans can live the fashionable lifestyle 24/7.

"I jumped at the chance because my parents are both architects and I grew up with a love of all design, whether it be fashion, industrial or residential," said designer Peter Som on the phone from his New York office last week. Som oversaw all aspects of the interiors at 485 Fifth Avenue, The Lofts at Bryant Park, a "collection" of luxury residences in midtown Manhattan that is set to open in spring 2007.

From the communal second-floor garden to a three-story winding staircase in the lobby, whose filigree lace metalwork is a reinterpretation of Som's signature chrysanthemum-patterned fabric from his spring 2006 collection, each of the 104 residences bear Som's sophisticated imprint.

"I definitely try and translate how I feel about clothing into architecture," said Som. "It's all about everyday elegance, really beautiful materials and being functional and easy, but still classic."

Jade Jagger, creative director of the Garrard jewelry line, lent her name to JADE, a luxury condominium in New York's Chelsea, which is set to open in December of this year. Every detail of JADE's 57 apartments was inspired by Jagger's jet-setting lifestyle, and several of the design elements were directly inspired by her experience as an accessories designer, including the centrally located "Pods," free-standing lacquered cubes that open to reveal the kitchen, bathroom and storage space within.

In Brooklyn, meanwhile, shoe designer Kristen Lee has just put the finishing touches on Pied-A-Terre, a private apartment in a fully renovated, turn-of-the-century factory building. The elegantly decorated 1,200-square-foot, two-bedroom apartment features traditional black and white fixtures and furniture offset by light mint-green details and ebony-stained bamboo floors, and is available to fashion and film industry insiders for short- or long-term rental.

"I designed it to be interesting and chic, yet comfortable and soothing," said the Los Angeles-based Lee via e-mail. "An absolute must in New York City!"

Pumped-in Propaganda

MUSIC | Earlier this year, a proposal was floated to relax Metro's ban on musicians and other entertainers in the Metrorail system, potentially bringing music into our cathedral of public transit. But some have complained that could subject commuters to unwanted noise. If they think that's bad, they should imagine taking a ride on Pyongyang's subway system. Commuters in the North Korean capital get to listen to martial music, along with public service announcements that reportedly urge them to be on the look-

RISEING: Near the Pentagon, the Air Force memorial is close to completion.

Pentagon in recent weeks, you've seen a new monument take shape. The U.S. Air Force Memorial, which is being erected next to the Navy Annex on a hill overlooking the Pentagon and beyond it, the monumental core of the nation's capital, is nearing completion and will be dedicated on Oct. 14, featuring a performance by Lee Ann Womack. The memorial grounds will open to the public on Oct. 15.

Unlike some monuments in the city, the Air Force memorial can be enjoyed from afar, adding a dramatic new element to the skyline.

According to a July article by The Post's Rick Weiss, the architect of the memorial, the late James Ingo Freed, was inspired while watching television: "He happened upon footage of a team of Air Force jets performing the dramatic bomb-burst formation, in which several planes shoot skyward in unison and then peel off from each other, creating high-rising vapor trails that curl over at their tops." 'Snakes' Star

Actor FLEX ALEXANDER, who plays "Three Gs" in "Snakes on a Plane" was online Friday at washingtonpost.com to discuss the filming of the cult movie that came out over the weekend.

How did you first learn about "Snakes on a Plane," and what about it made you want to get a role in the film?

I first learned about it through my agent and they told me about the script and when I heard the name of the movie, I thought it was a joke because I had done a show called "Homeboys in Outer Space." But when they said Samuel L. Jackson was doing it, I dove right in.

I want to know about the snakes!

How close did you come to any real snakes? Were any of your fellow actors (or you) freaking out about the prospect of working with all those slithering creatures?

I had some snakes fall on me in the movie, but it was done very well. Our snake wrangler, Jules, had us well-prepared, and no one was in danger at any time.

Did you pattern your "Snakes" character after anyone in particular?

No, there was no pattern. It was just a smooth cat who happened to be on this flight and who happened to be a rapper. I didn't want to play or look like the stereotypical rapper with a thousand gold chains — too over-the-top. If there's anyone you want to compare the character to, it would be P. Diddy, but I really didn't pattern him after P. Diddy.

True or false: There is no movie concept that Samuel L. Jackson will turn down.

Not true. Not true. If that were Harrison Ford, would you ask that question? The man is an amazing actor and amazing person and he loves to work.

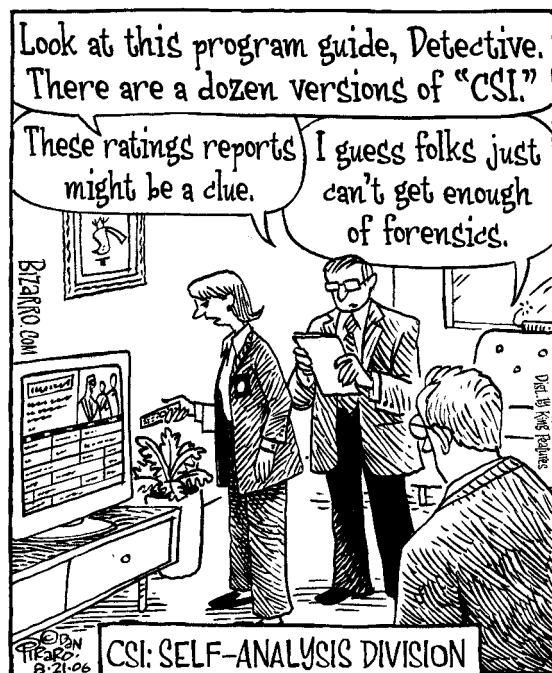

What was the atmosphere like on the set? Generally laid-back? Enjoyable work environment?

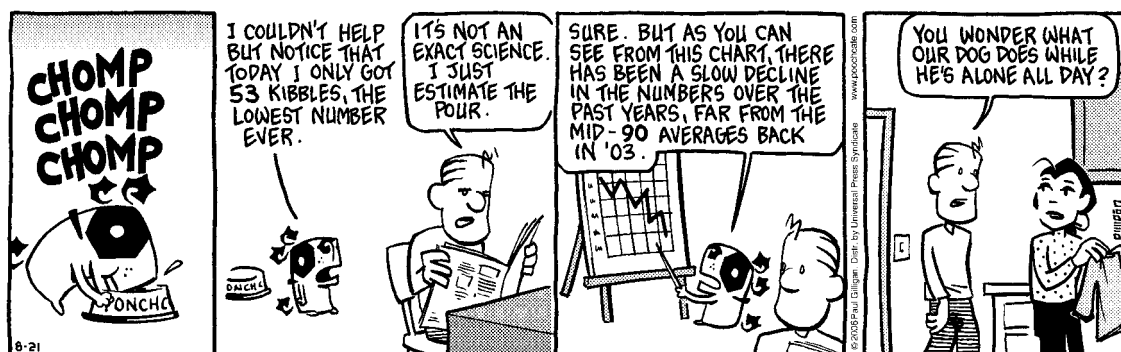

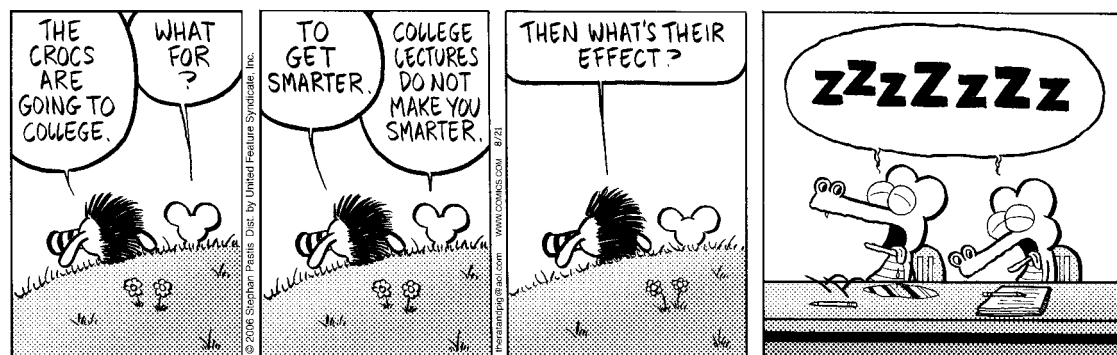

It was fun and laid-back, never too serious, always fun; but when we had to take care of business, we took care of business.

DO

SIC SAMUEL L. JACKSON ON YOUR FRIENDS. You're either the type of person who will see "Snakes on a Plane" or you're not; that's not going to change. Regardless, everyone deserves a promotional recorded personalized call (snakesonaplane.varitalk.com) from the film's star, because his wrath should be shared.

In Defense of 'Seat Hogs'

IN RESPONSE TO THURSDAY'S letter about Metro riders not moving from aisle seats ("Move Over, Seat Hogs"), some of us have long legs that make the window seat extremely uncomfortable. An aisle seat affords us the opportunity to sit at an angle for better leg room. Even with my iPod and crossword puzzle, I notice when anyone stands in front of me or points to the empty seat, and I immediately allow them in. I've never seen that empty window seat stay empty because I'm sitting by the aisle. As a matter of fact, most people appear appreciative that they even have a seat during rush hour.
